

Raku Pottery

Learners took part in a workshop arranged by Brixham Adult & Community Learning using the traditional way of firing pots using a 'green' method which uses fire rather than electricity. Pots were created using fire rather than electricity and later decorated with natural glazes before the final firing stage. Students were introduced to Lupton and the opportunities for volunteering, including helping in the Sanctuary Pottery based there and four learners intend to take up this valuable volunteer work. Information about further courses at South Devon College and Plymouth Arts College were provided.

Learners' comments included "course well organised – notes very informative , teacher was a good communicator and inspiring" and "brilliant course".
